SEC.01

1 • WHO IS SPEAKING

Someone who has actually done the thing, writing it down so someone else can do it too.

Riposte Laboratories counter-attacks the waste stream: discarded plastic (model-kit runners and sprues) becomes injection-moulded goods – Plastic Works; reclaimed lithium cells become modular solar power tiles – Project HEX.

The company is not selling a vision. It's reporting results. Write accordingly.

SEC.02

2 • THE TWO REGISTERS

Same voice, two modes. Both JetBrains Mono; the difference is case, not family.

THE DOCUMENT – CHROME

Uppercase, tracked, filed. Identifiers, never sentences.

DOC NO. RL-200-A SEC.03 REV. A SPEC / HEX UNIT EST. 2026

Section heads carry a lowercase slash-tag, right-aligned, like a code comment:

SEC.02 THE COUNTER-ATTACK // local loop injection molding

THE BUILDER – PROSE

Sentence case, weights 400/700. Plainspoken, concrete, quietly witty. The wit comes from precision, not from jokes:

A disposable vape is, functionally, a lithium cell wrapped in plastic and marketed as trash.

That sentence is funny because it's accurate. That's the whole technique. It never winks, never puns, never uses an exclamation mark.

SEC. 03

3 • RULES

1. Bold the numbers that matter. Load-bearing figures and units go 700 in prose: 14.46 Wh, 45 × 13 mm, 72%. Unbolded numbers are context; bolded numbers are the argument.
2. Concrete over abstract. "A 14.46 Wh cell measuring 45 × 13 mm" beats "high-density energy storage". If you can't name the number, you probably shouldn't make the claim.
3. No marketing verbs. Nothing leverages, unlocks, revolutionises, empowers or is passionate about. Things are made, tested, measured, shipped, and sometimes they fail.
4. Fencing is the frame, not the decoration. Parry → riposte → return is process language: the parry is the deflection (diverting waste), the riposte is the counter (making something), the return is the loop closing. Use it structurally. Don't pepper the copy with swordplay metaphors.
5. Admit the limits. If a figure is illustrative, say so, loudly. If a process only works at small scale, say that too. Credibility is the entire product.
6. No exclamation marks. None. Anywhere.
7. Second person for instructions, first person plural sparingly. "Sort the runners by resin code" – not "we recommend that users sort".

5 • PLACEHOLDERS ARE HONEST AND LOUD

A placeholder that looks like real data is a liability. Make it impossible to ship by accident:

$[TAM]

[Q_/__]

[PARTNER NAME]

▲ Illustrative – replace before sending

Use the .stamp component (rotated -2deg, marigold outline) for DRAFT and ILLUSTRATIVE overlays on decks.

SEC.06

6 • GLYPHS

▶ bullets      ✓ pass      × fail      ! warning
→ flow        ↓ flow (stacked)      ▼ disclosure
◆ marker      (R) the loop  (@) contact

No emoji beyond 🔄 and ☒. Units use × (U+00D7), not x. Ranges use en dashes without spaces: 56–62ch.

SEC.07

7 • DOCUMENTATION

Every Riposte repo's README follows the same shape:

MARKDOWN

Project Name

DOC NO. RL-NNN-A • REV. A

> One-sentence statement of what this is and what it counters.

[what it does – concrete, with numbers]

Contents / Build / Use
...

---

<colophon>

- ▶ Headings sentence case in Markdown. GitHub renders Markdown in a proportional face with its own type scale; forcing UPPERCASE there fights the platform and hurts searchability. The uppercase register is for surfaces we control – HTML, decks, print. The document chrome (DOC NO., REV.) stays uppercase because it's an identifier.

- ▶ Lead with what it is, not why it matters.
- ▶ Tables over prose for anything with more than three parallel facts.
- ▶ Close with the colophon – see any Riposte `BRAND.md`.
- ▶ Code blocks always get a language tag.

8 • BEFORE YOU PUBLISH

- ☐ Every number checked, and load-bearing ones bolded
- ☐ No exclamation marks, no marketing verbs
- ☐ Placeholders either filled or loudly flagged
- ☐ Uppercase achieved with `text-transform`, not typed (screen readers)
- ☐ Colophon present
- ☐ `DOC NO.` and `REV.` correct
